Use of logo

Clear space rule

Provide adequate space around the logo so that it is clearly distinct from other logos, images or text.

Primary background: white

The logo should appear on a white background whenever possible.

Never place the logo over a strongly coloured background or photograph.

Secondary background: gold or earth green tint

If a non-white background is needed, use a 20% or less tint of the logo gold or logo dark green.

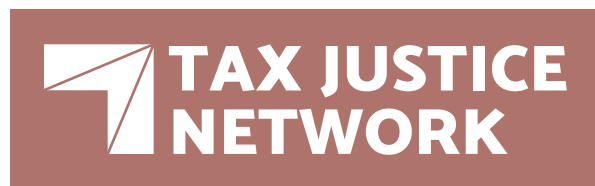

Logo variants

Reversed out logo

When the primary logo cannot be used, a reversed out logo can be used on a black, primary colour or support colour background.

This can be used when the logo is used by third parties, for example as an endorsement and needs to be in white reversed out.

Black only logos

For when colour printing is unavailable.

Logo font

The font used in the logo is Catamaran Black. This font is only used in the logo and should never be used anywhere else in our work or publications.

For information about the font to use in publications, see the Tax Justice Network's house style guide.

Using the arrow separately

One-colour arrow

The Tax Justice Network’s arrow can be used separately on its own as a visual device across our materials.

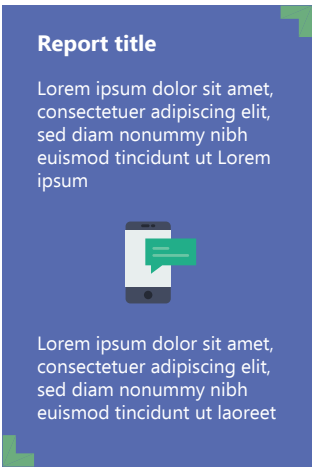

When used separately, the arrow must always feature one single colour - never multiple colours.

Colours that can be used for the arrow are our primary and secondary colours above. Never tinted colours.

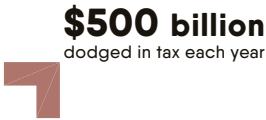

Decorative uses

The arrow can be used as a decorative accent in corners and other layout spaces in which the arrow visually “fits”.

Draw attention

The arrow can be used to emphasise a title, the start of a body of text, a figure or a quotation.

Heavy-design use

The arrow can be used as a “building block” and in repetition to create abstract visual designs that visually echo or maintain the aesthetic identity of at the arrow.

As there can be various ways to implement this, here are some dos and donts to help maintain the consistency and integrity of the arrow’s design:

- Do not scale the arrow non-uniformly.
- Do not overlap arrows.
- Do not crop arrows.
- Arrows should only be rotated at 90 degree or 45 degree intervals.
- While different colours can be used for different arrow “blocks”, do not use multiple colours in a single arrow.

Using the arrow in typography

The arrow can be used as a representational letter in promotional text-based design.

This may only be done with the Big John font. The Big John font must be set to a reverse outline.

The arrow should be used as a letter sparingly, occurring no more than once in a word. T he arrow should only be used at the start or end of a string of text

The arrow should only be rotated at 45 or 90 degree intervals.
